This project consisted of the addition of an unenclosed gaming terrace onto an existing structure. The extension is formed in structural steel and has louvered walls and an open roof section as its main features, in order for the terrace to be considered an outdoor area.

The project ran for 13 weeks and was coordinated with the Club to allow continued trading for the duration of the works.

The main feature of the new unenclosed terrace was the open roof area with a landscaped area beneath. This has both an aesthetic and a functional purpose. The open roof section in conjunction with louvered walls allows the terrace to be used for smoking.

The architectural design for this project was carried out by Altis Architecture who specialise in club projects.
